The film is based on Jane Austen's novel of the same name, with changes made by the author Elizabeth Gaskell. It stars, among others, Parminder Nagra, Dev Patel, Radhika Apte, and Wasim Akram. It is Chadha's second collaboration with the cast of her previous film, Bend It Like Beckham (2002). Plot Mia Andrews and Babita Chaudhary, residents of Pemberley, are childhood friends who have been separated for the past 10 years. As they share memories and reminisce about their lives in India and England, the members of their respective families, Mr. Darcy and Mr. Bingley, enter. They immediately dislike each other. On the day that Bingley arrives, he and Elizabeth Darcy meet and begin talking about Bingley's upcoming marriage. An argument ensues, and Elizabeth concludes that Bingley has promised the hand of her eldest sister Jane to his friend Mr. Wickham. Bingley and Jane leave soon afterwards. At the birthday party for Jane, Mrs. Bennet asks Mia to explain her presence in the neighbourhood. The two then reminisce about their childhood, the next day, and eventually become close friends. Mia goes to visit her parents, who live in an Indian village in Punjab, in the hopes of establishing contact with her brother. There, she meets Abba, a cousin of her father's and a lawyer in the local court, and is attracted to him. She is also attracted to an openly gay man, Parminder, who is Abba's friend. The two are planning to elope together and run away to a new life, but it is forbidden to leave India without permission from the authorities, and they cannot obtain a passport for the trip abroad. Their feelings are thwarted when Mia goes to Delhi for a short time. After returning, she discovers that Abba is engaged to be married to a much younger woman and that Parminder is engaged to another man. He is angered that she never mentioned her plans to him, and is therefore unfaithful. He leaves, saying that he wants to focus on his career in the law. At the Bingleys' ball, Bingley and Jane dance, but remain estranged. Jane admits to Elizabeth that she has been secretly seeing Wickham. Bingley, however, wishes to go ahead with the marriage, ignoring Jane's statement. The next morning, Mrs. Bennet forces Bingley into the morning 82157476af
